

New Jersey professor is national winner

3 Marylanders named 'spokesman of the year'

Three Maryland residents affiliated with agriculture have been selected for national recognition in the 1975 "Spokesman of the Year" contest, sponsored annually by the Chervon Chemical Company and Farm Chemicals magazine.

Two of the award winners are faculty members in the Division of Agricultural and Life Sciences at the University of Maryland in College Park. The third honoree is a livestock producer and grain farmer in the Upper Bay area of northeast Maryland.

Four national winners were selected in the open section of the contest. Named as winner for the Eastern region of the U.S. was Henry S. Holloway of Darlington, Md., currently serving as first vice-president of the Maryland Farm Bureau, Inc.

Holloway received a hand-carved trophy and cash award from a Chervon Chemical Company official on March 24 during a Rotary Club Farmers Night program in Bel Air.

In recent years, he has hosted many groups at his farm to help gain a better understanding for agriculture. These have included youth delegations, meat boycotters and family participants in the annual statewide Farm Visitation Day each June since 1968.

During the past two or three years, Holloway has appeared on 10 television and radio programs in the Baltimore metropolitan area to help promote better public understanding of farm policy issues and cost-price considerations. He has also participated in a radio talk show aimed at consumers. And he is often quoted in local and area newspapers.

Holloway is a past president of the Harford County Farm Bureau organization and past chairman of the county soil conservation district. He currently holds membership on the county's land use planning advisory council.

The personable farm spokesman and his wife represent the fourth generation of the Holloway family living in the old Holloway homestead, built in 1805. Fifth-generation Holloways in the household include Henry, Jr., 17 a budding Chester White 4-H and FFA swine breeder; his sisters, Teresa, 13, and Judy,

Henry Holloway, right, has taken the farmer's story directly to the consumer on many occasions, including TV appearances. He believes it's important for farmers to do their part in striving for a better understanding between farmers and consumers. The public-relations minded farmer gives much of the credit to his brother Richard, left. The two farm close to 700 acres in partnership. "If my brother weren't here to keep things going, I wouldn't be able to tell agriculture's story in town," the award recipient remarked.
