York poultry queen chosen

YORK - A full house of York County poultry producers met here at Avalong's Restaurant last Tuesday for dinner and to see their new Queen. Four well qualified girls competed for the title, which was eventually won by 17-year old Sandra D. Markey of York R8.

A 1976 graduate of Dallastown High School, Sandra has been active in school, her community, and on her parents' 60 acre farm. The Markeys raise fruits and vegetables, and keep between 2500 and 3000 layers. While involved with various phases of the farming operation as the need arises, the new Queen says her main job has been to sell them at the Central and Eastern markets in town. "I like this part of the business best because I'm dealing with the public and like working with people," she explained

Runner-up in the pageant, which was emceed by York County Agent, John Smith, was Ginger Wolf, who was Prom Queen of her graduating class this year. The vivacious brunette from Stewartstown R2 will represent York County egg producers at various functions when Sandra is unable to do so. She is the 18-year old daughter of George and Hazel Wolf and a sister to James Wolf, former president of the York County Poultry Association.

Amy Warner, Stewartstown R2, and Cindy

Waltersdorff of York completed the slate of contestants. Amy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Elmer Warner and a recipient of the York County 4-H Poultry Award as well as a distinguished honor student. Cindy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Waltersdorff, cited work on her parents' poultry farm as a main interest and was also an honor student at Dallastown High School.

Sandra, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Markey, is 5-feet, 3-inches tall, has light-brown hair and blue eyes. She is very much interested in singing and hopes to be working as a secretary this Fall.
