be searching good cow families for bulls, so that the base isn't narrowed. He also urged that cows be identified by sire, pointing out that in California less than 15 per cent of the animals are registered by sire. And, in Mississippi, only two per cent were registered in this manner.

After Blodgett stepped down, Bob Morris, director of Special Programs for the Holstein Association spoke on exporting animals on the international market. His goal was to explain to the breeders the existing conditions in the exporting business, and to make clear why certain problems exist.

One common complaint Morris tried to handle was that of price. The price of the animals is affected by transportation costs, health tests, and quarantines, he explained. Morris also told of how the animals are processed to get them ready to go overseas, adding that if an animal has ringworm or warts, "the federal government won't let them out of the country."

Then, Mike Nolan, Eastern Pa. program director for the Pa. Holstein Association, recapped the National Convention, spoke on grade identification, and the procedure of how to become a delegate to the convention.

After the brief speeches concluded, it was time to hand out the prizes for the dairy judging.

In the children's division, Susan Kulp took first place with a total of 98 points. In the women's division Carol Facey also had 98 points for a top prize, and in the men's division, Jim Shaw and Melvin Stoltzfus tied for first with another 98-point record.

The other winners in the various categories were: Children's division - 2. Victor Stoltzfus 3. Katie Yeager and Jerry Hostetter; Women's division - 2. Carol Yeager and Porcia Breckbill 3. Sue Lamborn; Men's division - 2. Mark Yeager and Donald

Kulp, children's division. Not pictured is Melvin Stoltzfus, who tied with Shaw for first place in the men's division.

Jon David Petersheim was the lucky person to win this calf at the Chester County Holstein Day. His name was picked out of a drawing containing the names of 8- to 15-year-olds.

Hettinger 3. John Stoltzfus 4. Stanley Guest.

The winners got to choose from an assortment of prizes given by 18 different contributors.

After the prizes were awarded, there was still one more prize drawing remaining - that of giving away a calf to any 8- to 15-year old. Jon David Petersheim, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elam Petersheim, Morgantown, was the lucky person whose name was drawn out of the hat. Jon's father says that his son will now be two years ahead of the rest of the family who usually get a calf to raise at the age of 12.

The calf was donated by Donal Hostetter for this special event.

The Extension program developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and our land-grant universities has been the vital link between laboratory and farm.

Two centuries ago, in 1776, when more than 90 percent of the population lived on farms, one farmworker produced food for himself and just about two other people.
