the event. Ruby is State treasurer, and Geib is regional vice-president.

Willow Street FFA is the home chapter for another key person attending the convention. Marcia Hess, Pennsylvania State FFA princess, will take part in the festivities as she vies for the national FFA princess title.

Several Lancaster chapters also have members competing in one or more of the eight national agriculture contests. For instance, Ephrata has two boys competing in milk products judging and one in livestock judging. Richard Strauss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strauss, Ephrata R1, is the livestock judge who is going to the convention. Rick placed third in the state contest, so he and the top two boys in livestock judging from Pennsylvania will make up the state team.

Lamar Groff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Groff, Stevens R1, is a milk products judge who placed second in the state contest. Along with Hans Groff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Groff, 123 Lincoln Ave., Ephrata, who is the first place individual in state milk products judging, the Ephrata boys make up the majority of the three-man state team competing at nationals.

Grassland Chapter also has two of its members competing in the national contests. Harry Boley, East Earl, and Kenneth Fox, New Holland, will be competing in the national poultry contest. Robert Woods, vocational agriculture teacher at Garden Spot High School, is the coach. For further information on this area of competition, turn to page 94 for "Thoughts in Passing."

Rick Falk, Millersville R1, is a Penn Manor student and member of the Manor FFA who will be attending the national convention to compete in meats judging.

Brownstown Vo-Tech is also responsible for sending one half of the state's horticulture team and also its coach, Mrs. Jennifer Brown, to the convention. The two girls Brownstown will be sending are Cindy Shreiner, Lititz R1, and Brenda Albright, 10 West Main Street, Leola. These two girls are the top floraculture judges in the state, and comprise half the team which is also made up of two horticulture majors.

This year 40 teams will test their knowledge by identifying plant materials; judging nursery products, and landscape models, taking a written examination in such areas as plant materials, growing media, plant disorders, propagation, safety, and cultural instructions.

In addition to these contestants and state delegates to the convention, several
