

Concerned about legislation, zoning orders, etc. which might possibly have an effect on agriculture, members of the Lancaster County Farmers Association recently decided to have themselves represented at all township meetings which relate to farming. Member volunteers will offer their time to monitor these meetings in order to assure farmer representation and protect agriculture. The Association, which mounted a membership drive this week, has been noticeably more active and effective in recent months through public relations projects and other programs. Most spectacular of these was an effort put on at Lancaster's Park City Mall in October.
