My Thoughts

And welcome to them

By JOANNE SPAHR

Associate Editor

When I was a child, Easter didn't mean egg rolls on the front lawn or even a big cache of Easter candy on that special Sunday morning. Instead, more often than not, my Easter basket consisted mostly of a lot of geen excelsior and an occasional chocolate bunny or a maited egg midst all the packing materials.

And, if I recall correctly, I didn't always have new Easter dresses with which to impress my friends.

While this sounds like I was the proverbial "deprived child" of the '50's, I really wasn't. My parents were starting out in farming, and we all had to make sacrifices -- and my brother and I knew it.

We learned to live frugally, within our means, and without every single whim or fancy fulfilled. So, an occasional splurge was really exciting, and we didn't often forget those special events.

Now, of course, things have changed considerably on the farm, but the lessons of childhood still remain. An occasional splurge is fun, but more often than not, I "do without," as my grandfather would say, when an expense isn't necessary.

So, once again this Easter there will be no new Easter dress, and no candy, except possibly the basket I plan to give my little nephew -- after all, we don't want him to miss out on any of the good things in life.
