War on brucellosis declared

PARK RIDGE, Ill. -- Recommendations by the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), beef cattle and dairy advisory committees for stepped up research and an aggressive control program to hasten the eradication of brucellosis in the U.S. have been approved by the AFBF board of directors.

Acting on the approved recommendations, AFBF has requested that appropriations for the jointly funded state-federal eradication program include adequate funds for indemnities to encourage the complete depopulation of beef and dairy herds under quarantine because of brucellosis that cannot be quickly cleaned up by test and slaughter procedures. Action also has been requested for strengthening the milk ring test to identify reactors in dairy cattle.

Support has been given for indemnities for exposed S-branded cattle that are not returned to the farm or ranch and for expansion of the calfhood vaccination program with federal funds providing the vaccine and administration where it is most needed.

AFBF has requested that states with approved eradication programs not be limited to the current 60 per cent federal funding participation.

Additional research has been requested for the development of a more effective vaccine than Strain 19 now in use which can be administered to both young and adult cattle; for creation of a test to determine the difference between cattle with a suspicious reaction and those with brucellosis; and for the improvement of surveillance procedures for identifying infected herds.

Other committee recommendations approved by the AFBF board and upon which action has been requested include: strict monitoring of the use and distribution of Strain 19 vaccine; use of adult vaccination in herds under strictly controlled conditions; establishment of an alternate position on the animal for placing the S-brand used to identify suspect animals; prosecution of veterinarians who illegally screen brucellosis infected cattle; and enforcement of state-federal regulations in intrastate and interstate movement of cattle.
