and the machinery shed into a garage.

They did keep one of the most notable features of the stone barns of Chester County - the conical supports - and included them in the architecture of the home.

And, on the east stone wall, they constructed an open portal for the sun to shine through in the morning. The rays go directly into the master bedroom.

In general, as a result of extensive planning, the house, which is still in some stages of construction, is a breathtaking labyrinth of angles.
