Women's conference set for June

PITTSBURGH, Pa. - The Committee of the International Women's Year Commission recently announced plans for "Womankind", a federally-"Womankind", a federally-selected from the state funded statewide women's meetings," Tucker exconference which will be held June 24-26 at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh.

The conference is part of a nationwide series of women's meetings mandated last year by Congress, according to Secretary of State C. DeLores Tucker and State Senator Jeanette Reibman.

"Congress appropriated $5 Pennsylvania Coordinating million to hold a women's conference in each state, plus a national conference in Houston in November, which for will draw representatives plained.

"The conference will make specific recommendations to eliminate barriers which prevent women from participating equally in national life. In Pennsylvania we'll come up with a Plan of Action to improve women's status in the Commonwealth," she added.

Tucker and Reibman stressed that the Pennsylvania "Womankind" Conference is open to all women in the Commonwealth. They said the federally-designated Pennsylvania Coordinating Committee is seeking to involve as many individual women and women's groups as possible in conference planning and in the conference itself.

"We're making a real effort to reach women at all levels-particularly women who ordinarily might not be involved in a women's issues conference," Reibman stated.

"Child care will be provided at the conference, and financial assistance to cover conference fees, food and lodging will be available for women who need it," she said.

Special week-long coverage and programming on Pennsylvania's Public Television Network is also planned to bring the conference to women who might not physically be able to attend, according to Mary Hughes Burns, Dillsburg resident who is one of three co-chairs the of "Womankind" conference.

The conference will feature guest speakers, workshops on women's issues and cultural events.
