

Hesston dealing with Eastern Bloc countries

HESSTON, Kans. - The Hesston Corporation announced recently that separate purchase agreements have been signed with two Eastern Bloc countries for $7 million in farm equipment and components to be delivered over the next four years.

Contracts were signed with state-operated companies in Hungary for 80 self-propelled forage harvesters manufactured by Hesston's Coex Division in France. Twenty-five of these are to be delivered in 1977 and the balance by 1980. Also, twelve complete, U.S.-produced Hesston StakHand Hay Handling Systems are to be delivered this year. Total amount of these contracts is approximately $4.5 million.

Simultaneously, a $2.5 million contract with Agromachinainpex, the state-manufacturer of farm equipment in Bulgaria, was signed calling for delivery in 1977 of 500 three-row corn heads and chopper (cutter) boxes for forage harvesters which are manufactured in Bulgaria using Hesston components. These components are produced by the Hesston France Coex Division.

Part of the Hungarian transaction is a cooperative contract whereby Hesston will buy an equal amount of Hungarian-produced products between now and 1982. These include three-row forage harvester heads, which Hesston has licensed a Hungarian firm to manufacture, and for gear boxes, which are used on most Hesston-produced equipment. There is no reciprocal agreement involved in the Bulgarian transaction.

Lyle E. Yost, chairman of Hesston, said the contracts have been under negotiation for several months with representatives of the individual governments.

"While there will be no immediate effect upon our North American Operations, these contracts do directly benefit our European factory immediately," Yost said.

"Of greater significance are the long range benefits because we anticipate there will be continued purchases by both countries," he said.

The Bulgarian Ministry of Agriculture, for instance, has standardized on the Hesston forage harvester components and forecast they will manufacture about 500 units a year in the future to be sold to other Eastern Bloc countries.

The Hungarian contract states that additional purchases self-propelled forage harvesters can be made during this time and that the reciprocal purchases by Hesston of Hungarian products may be as little as 50 per cent of the purchase price.

In addition, a cooperative agreement has been reached with Zmaj, a Yugoslavian manufacturer of farm equipment. This agreement calls for the Yugoslavian company to purchase farm equipment machines, manufactured by Hesston, utilizing components purchased by Hesston from Yugoslavia.

Reciprocal purchase agreements are common in most dealings with Eastern Bloc countries, Yost noted.

The complicated agreements involved three different Hungarian contracts involving Agrotroszt, the buying company for all agricultural equipment for Hungary and Komplex, the Hungarian trading company for factory equipment and who also represent the Hungarian manufacturer for Hesston-licensed components.

The Bulgarian contract was a three-party agreement between Hesston, Agromachinainpex their official representative in France, Compagnie Internationale de Matieres

CONSUMER GUIDELINES

Washing Blinds

When washing blinds, start at the top and clean one slat at a time with a sponge or cloth wrung out of suds. Wash both sides of the slat at the same time by folding your cloth around the slat and slide from left to right. Wooden slats should not be immersed since they may warp. Wipe these with a damp cloth and dry. Scrub venetian blind tapes with thick suds and sponge rinse.
