the main weather worry of most orchard farmers in the county. John Wolgemuth, Mount Joy, too stated that moisture now was his main concern. "The mosture content in the topsoil is all right now with the recent rains but we could use more moisture in the subsoil," he mentioned. Wolgemuth starte picking early apples and peaches last week and he expects better than average crops.

Raymond Kauffman, Ronks, noted that his peaches and apples looked very good and he hoped for nearly 100 per cent from his crops. "About the worse thing that could happen now is for a hail storm to come along," was his comment. "However, unless something unforeseen happens this summer, the crops should be excellent."

Weather seems to be a main concern of fruit growers in Lancaster County. Too much moisture or not enough moisture, hail, sudden freezing weather, high winds, and storms can all greatly affect the fruit harvest in a very short time and have a disasterous effect

Another problem which affects orchard farmers is insect and disease control. Although the crops are fairly clean now, constant inspection of trees and fruit for insects and disease must be done. Insecticides play an important part of pest control.

There are also labor problems in orchard farming. Government regulations can make it difficult for both the farmer and the migrant worker in the large orchard business. Recent laws have added to the problem.

Orchard farmers predict that in the future more dwarf trees will be grown in Lancaster County, more mechanical harvesting will be done using less workers, and the fruit crops will be bigger and better in the next few years.
