

Barley heads growing Republicans

LANCASTER - There's a crop of Republicans in Lancaster County which needs to be harvested, according to John Barley, 31-year old dairy farmer from Conestoga. Barley heads a voter registration drive which is designed to get an estimated 60,000 unregistered voters to the polls by the next election. According to county election figures, about one in three of Lancaster County's 180,000 potential voters is not registered. Barley, who is a partner in

Star Rock Farms, which earlier this year was the center of a dispute involving the Lancaster Area Refuse Authority (LARA) is one of 20 on the committee to drum up support for the Republican Party in Lancaster County. He's being assisted by Donald Ranck, a Strasburg area dairyman. The GOP registration effort is organized by county school district boundaries. Each district was a volunteer coordinator. Those coordinators and the districts they represent are:

John Barley

Kenneth B. Mable of Columbia, Peter Schannauer of Cocalico, Donald Kugle of Donegal, Carolyn L. Price of Eastern Lancaster County, Steven Cabaugh of Elizabethtown and Ethel M. Zook at Lampeter Strasburg.

Also Richard Schneider, Eugene S. Rutherford Jr. and Earle W. Schmuckle, all of Lancaster City; Kathleen P. Zeller of Lancaster Township, Dr. David Wenger of Manheim Township and Thomas Goodman of Penn Manor.

Also, Harold A. Hess of Pequea Valley, Ethel J. Armer of Solanco, Dean L. Baublitz of Warwick, Barbara Young of Ephrata, Richard Reese of Conestoga

Valley, Arthur Campbell of Hempfield and Jacob L. Brown of Manheim Central.

Coordinators have been given the assignment of forming separate voter registration committees within their districts. According to Barley, each school district group will conduct door-to-door street canvasses, plus will operate voter registration booths at county festivals and fairs. Although the drive is now underway, the county GOP has earmarked the weekends of September as "blitz" weekends during each concentrated registration efforts will occur.
