

Dallastown Fair's grand champion 4-H sheep fitter trophy was won by Lisa Dobrosky, Glen Rock R2, left. Tom Flory, right, Red Lion R4, was named the grand champion showman.

Don Flory, Red Lion R4, made a clear sweep of the Dallastown Fair 4-H Market Lamb show, taking the purple rosettes for champion and reserve champion market lamb and champion pair.

Dallastown Fair posts sheep winners

DALLASTOWN, Pa. - A pair of heavyweight market lambs owned by Don Flory, Red Lion R4, took top honors during the 4-H sheep competition at the Dallastown Fair last week. The two Hampshires were named grand and reserve champions and capped off their victories with honors as the top-placed pair as well.

Flory has been showing sheep as a member of the Ore Valley club for seven years. The York County Vo-Tech student currently owns three head of sheep.

Champion showmanship honors were captured by 13-year-old Tom Flory, Red Lion R2, handling a heavyweight Dorset market lamb. The veteran of 4-H sheep exhibiting is a member of Ore Valley club and also captured the reserve market lamb honors in the open class show.

Lisa Dobrosky, Glen Rock R2, was named champion fitter during the lamb judging. A member of the Glen Rock club, Lisa, age 13, has carried her sheep projects for five years.

In the open class sheep, Michele Bankert, Red Lion R3, exhibited the grand champion market lamb. The lamb was a heavyweight crossbred. Reserve market lamb honors went to a Dorset shown by Tom Flory.

Official judge for the 4-H show was William Keck, Collegeville, and for the open show, H. James Shearer.

A listing of the 4-H and open competition follows.
