Pumpkins

Fred Funk, Millersville, who grows three and a half acres of pumpkins, began his harvesting last week. He calls his harvest very good, with healthy vines, and having enough rain over the summer months to get by. He noted that his pumpkins are a medium size with a good orange color to them.

When talking about the growing season, Funk noted that this year he sprayed his fields with more fungicide, but he felt there were no real problems in his fields.

Looking ahead to the Fall season, Funk spoke enthusiastically about a pumpkin decorating contest that his market sponsors for children, giving a prize to the winner. He mentioned that in the past, some of the creations were very unusual and outstanding.

A newcomer to the pumpkin growing, John Shenk, Lititz R6, spoke to Lancaster Farming about his first year of pumpkin growing. He grew one acre of pumpkins this year, using a special variety, that is supposed to be good for pies, use as jack-o-lanterns, and the roasting of the seeds.

Shenk thought he had a successful year in the pumpkin growing, and added that in his opinion, the past season was a good year for growing the crop.

Arts and Crafts Festival begins today and continues through Sunday near Harpers Ferry, W. Va. Daily, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
