EPHRATA - Energy, the economy and the environment are three topics set for one of the informative portions of the 100th Annual Convention of PennAg Industries Association. The convention will be held on Sept. 19-21 in Harrisburg. PennAg is a state-wide organization of some 400 Pennsylvania agribusiness firms, and is reported to be the oldest such organization in the country.

large electric utility whose operating companies include the Philadelphia Electric Co. and Pennsylvania Electric Co., in Pennsylvania and Jersey Central Power & Light Co. in New Jersey.

The three-day convention will feature trade and historical exhibits, appearances and speeches by key political figures, an annual golf tournament, and an awards banquet.

Wednesday morning, September 20, the state of the economy will be examined by Ted D. Gibson, senior economist at Pittsburgh's Mellon National Bank.

Energy, a vital component of the agribusiness picture, will be discussed by William B. Murray, vice-president for communications at G.P.U. Service Corp., Parsippany, N.J. G.P.U. is a Speaking on environmental issues will be Dr. C.E. Howes, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Va.

On Thursday morning, a panel of agribusiness presidents will take a look at the current state of their industry. Following the panel, PennAg's director of public relations, Richard Wanner, will present a slide film entitled "A Century of Agribusiness".

On Thursday afternoon, Warren P. Smith, vice-president and director of group sales for Hartford Life Insurance Co., will talk about the effects of social programs on American business and society in general.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Kent Shelhamer will discuss the future of agriculture in the state, while Dr. James Beattie, dean of Penn State's College of Agriculture, will talk about the second century of agribusiness.

Closing out Thursday afternoon's program will be an inspirational address by the Rev. Ernest K. Emurian, Cherrydale Methodist Church in Arlington, Va. His talk is entitled "Where Do You Put The 'P'?"
