Pa. Pork Council supporting heart valve research

STRASBURG - There are not many people who have not been affected directly or indirectly by heart surgery. Friends, relatives, or friends of friends have had pacemakers, by-pass, valve, or other open heart operations.

Within the last 10 years many replacement valves have been formulated from pig heart valves. They must go through rigorous tests, chemical bathes and scrutiny before they are placed in human patients. It has been found that these porcine valves are exceptionally well-suited because the human body does not reject them.

However, the longevity of such valves is not known at this time. Such experimentation and other more sophisticated studies continue.

Pa. Pork Council members, including Porkettes, are now supporting porcine heart valve research.

In October of 1978, Pork Council and Porkette members, sparked by Beth Cooper, Porkette president, talked with doctors and investigated local research needs. The decision was made to have a fund drive via donation tickets; this drive would culminate in February (during Heart Month) at the Keystone Pork Congress.

Help is needed from every pork producer; both for contributions and distribution of donation tickets. An individual may donate any amount; however, a dollar donation entitles a person to receive one ticket. This ticket may be held until February 16, at which time there will be a drawing for two door prizes of a man's pig suede jacket and a woman's pig suede coat.

Two hospitals that are working on porcine valve research have been selected to receive the monies collected.

Please call any PPC board member or Porkette Officer for more information and/or donation tickets.

Any inquiries may be directed to: Carol Henkel, Chairman Porcine Heart Valve Research Fund Drive, R1, Box 221, Strasburg, Pa., 17579. Phone: 717-786-2562.

heifers.) The bull cost $1400, has a useful life expectancy of seven years, and had not been used for breeding.

Based on these investments, Sisson said, Green can deduct from his tax bill a 10 per cent investment tax credit of $360, derived from "qualified investment" of $3600. That's based on a formula taken from IRS Form 3468.

A third of the tractor cost, or $1000, is qualifying. Two-thirds of the cost of the cows, or $1200, is qualifying. IRS says all of the cost of the bull, $1400, qualifies. Total, all items: $3600, of which 10 per cent is deductible.

If Green sold one of the above items before the year ended, it would not qualify for the tax credit, Sisson said. Also, if Green had sold substantially identical livestock, based on age, sex and purpose, during the year 1978, he would have to subtract the total received for animals sold from the investment total for the newly purchased livestock.

And, if Green resells any of the above items before the end of its "useful life" as used on Form 3468, he must recompute the credit, using the actual time he owned it.

Then he must make up any difference between credit he took and the recomputed credit, Sisson said.
