

Valentine table is a nice way to show you care

The candy colored centerpiece is for a Valentine party, and it's all concocted of cardboard, glue and paint! House is a small box, sprayed with pink paint, corrugated roof and eaves, sprayed white, are glued to lid. Frosting-like trim is glue. The cardboard base is sprayed cherry red and trimmed with path of paper hearts, with more hearts spray-stenciled on tablecloth. As for the lacy baskets, they're doilies layered with glue and molded around such shapes as a bowl or a lid.

NEW YORK, N.Y. - Who isn't in love with Valentine's Day, with its hearts and flowers and all its old-fashioned trimmings? And, in the midst of bleak winter, what could be more heart-warming than all those Valentine reds and pinks? It's enough to make you want to give a party just for the glow of it!

It's easy to make a table setting that creates a Valentine mood - with a heart-dotted tablecloth, doily baskets, and a confection of a centerpiece. Try one, two or put all three together for a table that's like a three-D Valentine!

To make the tablecloth, stencil an assortment of bright red hearts on a plain pink cloth (could be an old pink sheet!) Draw a variety of hearts on a piece of stiff paper or cardboard, and cut out to make stencil. Spread cloth on layers of newspaper, smooth flat, and lay stencil on it. Anchor stencil with masking tape, making sure it's flush with cloth so paint can't seep under. Mask adjacent areas of cloth with newspaper. Then spray lightly, holding (Turn to Page 99)
