

Ag economy and rural life to be discussed

HARRISBURG - Improving the agricultural economy and rural life in the Northeast will be the central issues facing the Northeast Agricultural Leadership Assembly (NALA), which convenes at the Cherry Hill Hyatt House in New Jersey, March 20-22.

Pennsylvania's State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, a member of the Executive Board for the Assembly, today said that related policies, legislation and research will be discussed by some 400 government officials, agricultural scientists, economists and rural life specialists from the ten Northeastern states in attendance.

A series of draft recommendations for action by the Assembly has been prepared by 75 experts who have documented issues involving Northeast agriculture for committees. The areas of concern include government and finance, rural life, production, energy, land, marketing and appropriate technology.

Hallowell said that the major goals of the conference are "to raise governmental and public awareness of the issues facing agriculture in the Northeast, to recommend policies and legislation and stimulate research to improve agriculture and help establish a regional basis for coordinating these improvements."

Keynote speakers for the NALA conference will include Governor Brendan Byrne of New Jersey and Dr.

Hardy Vogtmann, director of the Research Institute of Biological Husbandry, Oberwill, Switzerland. The NALA Conference Chairman is Frederick Winthrop, Jr.
