

Northeast Dairy Co-op names officers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Edward McNamara, Canajoharie dairyman and president of Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, was elected president of the Northeast Dairy Conference at its annual meeting held in Washington, D.C. April 3 and 4. McNamara, formerly Conference vice president, now presides over the organization which is comprised of nearly all of the Northeast's major dairy cooperatives, reaching from New England to Virginia, representing some 30,000 producers.

The Northeastern Dairy Conference was formed in 1935 as a means of strengthening the dairy cooperative effort on four major fronts: Milk marketing; Coordination of producer groups; Provide an agency of contact between the northeast dairy industry and related National programs; Suggesting educational and research programs in the solution of various industry problems.

At this year's meeting over 150 dairy leaders from several states assembled to hear presentations by industry experts and to participate in discussions ranging from the dairy outlook to federal pricing programs and cooperative financing.

The officers elected for the coming year are: President, Edward McNamara; Vice President, Walter Martz; Secretary, Fred Webster, Extension Economist, The University of Vermont; and Paul Hand, Economist for Interstate Milk Shippers Cooperative.
