

Dairy Expo was bigger than ever

By DIETER KRIEG
UNIVERSITY PARK — The largest dairy cattle exposition ever held at the Dairy Center of Penn State University took place here a week ago under brilliant sunshine and within hearing range of another big event: the Blue-White football game.

A sizable crowd was present for both attractions, with many of the dairy enthusiasts taking time out for a glimpse of what PSU football coach Joe Paterno has to offer this year. The Blue-White game, which marks the end of Spring football practice, ended in a 22-22 tie before a record attendance of 28,000 fans.

The 54th annual Penn

State Dairy Exposition began promptly at 8 a.m. and lasted until late afternoon. One-hundred and ten students were registered to take carefully manicured and trained bovines into the show ring. Many more helped with the preparations and ongoing work of the show. It was, by all accounts, the biggest dairy show ever held by the students of Penn State.

Students participating in the cattle show had been preparing for the big events even before Spring appeared in the Nittany area, and they continued to do so right up until it was time to bring their animals into the ring. The lawns around the show (Turn to Page 94)

More than 100 students from all over Pennsylvania participated in the Dairy Expo this year, vying for prizes in showmanship and fitting.

Gary Baxter of Stoneboro, Mercer County, won all the top honors at the Penn State Dairy Exposition last week.
