YORK - Top awards at the York 4-H dairy show went to several repeat winners when the county's clubs held their annual roundup event on August 3 at the York Fairgrounds.

Highlight of the day-long event was the noon celebrity milking contest. Paired against each other in the first competition were 19th district Congressman Bill Goodling and York city mayor Elizabeth Marshall. Congressman Goodling claimed the victory, as did radio personality Hal Raymond, paired up with competitor disc jockey Paxton Quigley.

In a third "mystery" match, contest organizer Kathy King of Delta, paired county extension agent John Smith against farm wife Sara Eisenhart, Thomasville. Both easily filled up a large measuring cup, but Mrs. Eisenhart topped the agent by a few ounces.

Type judge for the dairy classes was Holstein breeder

Thomas Dum III, Landisburg, Perry County, and fitting and showing official was Lancaster County agent Glenn Shirk.

Guernseys were the first breed into the ring, with senior and grand championship won by Tina Rutter, York, and her first-place four-year-old. Tina also exhibited the junior champion, a senior calf.

Darryl Rohrbaugh, New Freedom, also earned two high awards, the reserve senior and grand champion with his second place four-year-old cow, as well as reserve junior champion with a junior yearling.

Todd Rutter, York, exhibited the first place Guernsey junior calf, with Mike Blessing, Wrightsville, second, and Wendy Lu McCleary, Stewartstown, third. Chad Rutter, York, exhibited the winning intermediate calf and Lori Kessler, York, second.

Senior calf winners were Tina Rutter, York, first, Kelly Blessing, Wrightsville, second, Annette Walter, third, and Wendy Lu Mc-

the reserve senior and grand animal, and Tim and Todd Rutter holding the junior and reserve junior animals.

Cleary, fourth. Junior yearling class went to Darryl Rohrbaugh, New York-Adams Guernsey Breeders meet

BIGLERVILLE - The York-Adams Guernsey Breeders Association held their annual summer barbecue on July 25 at Westbrook Farms

Westbrook Farms, owned and operated by Lester VanArsdale and his three sons, milk nearly 200 head of Guernseys. A tour of the farm and its milking parlor and free stall barn setup was included as part of the evening program

Special guests for the evening meeting included Millie Linde of Quarryville, the state Guernsey queen, state president Raymond Witmer and national director Nelson Witmer.

Ginger Sechrist, office and field representative of the Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders Association introduced a newly-designed traveling display about the Guernsey cow, which will be available for use at fairs and other cattle promotional activities.

The state association business manager, Lee Yost, also spoke to the hundred-plus members and guests.

Two judging classes were brought out for a placings competition, with Ronald Trostle, of Red Lion, the official judge. Top winners, with matching perfect scores, were Ira Boyer, York, and Steve Staner, Red Lion.

Other judging winners of the aged cow and two-year-old classes included Janice Messinger, Cindy Rutter, Leona Hobaugh, Dean Amspacher and Wayne Hobaugh. American Breeders Service and Agway sponsored judging awards.
