

Sheep judging concludes at KILE

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, November 10, 1979-19

HARRISBURG—Out-of-state exhibitors captured all championship titles during the 1979 Cheviot, Dorset and Oxford Breeding Sheep Shows held Monday at the 23rd Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg.

Spraker & Wilson of Bath, New York, exhibited the champion Cheviot ram with their yearling entry. Homer Long of Ballard, West Virginia, showed his spring lamb to the reserve champion ram title. Long also exhibited the champion Cheviot ewe, which was yearling.

The reserve champion Cheviot ewe was exhibited by Robert and Edith Kelley of Showhegan, Maine. The Kelley's were also named premier exhibitor of the Cheviot show.

In the Dorset division, Birchwood Farm of Hinkley, Illinois, swept the competition with the champion ram, a spring lamb; the reserve champion ram, the second place spring lamb; the champion ewe, a yearling; and the reserve champion ewe which was the second place yearling. Birchwood Farm was also named premier exhibitor and the recipients of the J.R. Henderson Award for showing the first place exhibitors flock.

Ohio breeders dominated the Oxford judging with all but one award going to C. Williamson and Sons of Xenia, Ohio, who won champion ewe, champion ram, reserve champion ewe and the premier exhibitor award.

Reserve champion ram was won by a spring lamb exhibited by Gerald Thoma of Kensington, Ohio.

Carl Bradford of Wooster, Ohio, served as the Cheviot and Oxford judge, while Gary Ricketts of Urbana, Illinois, judged the Dorset competition.

Sheep judging was concluded on Tuesday, November 6 with competition in Merino, Columbia, Corriedale and rambouillet breeding sheep classes.

In the Merino judging, Charles Clouser and Daughters of Nova, Ohio, captured the champion ram title with their fall ram lamb. They also exhibited the reserve champion ewe, a spring lamb, and were named the premier exhibitors of the Merino show.

Joan Hess and Sons of Cable, Ohio, showed their spring ram lamb to the reserve championship and captured the champion ewe title with their yearling ewe.

In the Columbia competition, Joan Hess and Sons showed the champion ram, a yearling; the reserve champion ram, a spring lamb; the champion ewe; and were named the premier exhibitor of the Columbia show.

Kenneth Stoltz and Sons of Thornville, Ohio, exhibited the reserve champion ewe which was a spring lamb.

New York and Ohio breeders dominated the Corriedale judging.

Jagger Brothers of Mount Gilead, Ohio, showed their fall lamb to the champion ram title. They also exhibited the reserve champion ewe, a spring lamb, and were named premier exhibitors of the Corriedale show.

Laureen FitzPatrick of Maryland, New York, showed the reserve champion ram, a yearling, and also the champion Corriedale ewe, which was also a yearling.

The Rambouillet show concluded the competition with David Clouser's fall lamb entry being selected as champion ram. Clouser, of Nova, Ohio, also exhibited the reserve champion ewe which placed second in the yearling class.

Kenneth T. Moore of Nichols, New York, showed his yearling to the champion Rambouillet ewe title. Nichols also exhibited the reserve champion which stood second in the fall lamb class. Nichols was named the premier breeder of the Rambouillet show.

Carl Bradford of Wooster Ohio, served as Tuesday's show judge.

Bucks Co. horse wins Paint show

HARRISBURG - The 1979 Paint Horse Show signaled the beginning of performance and halter competition at the 1979 Keystone International Livestock Exposition, Saturday, November 3 at the State Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

"Halmark," a two-year-old colt owned by Windy Meadows Farm of Perkasio, Bucks County, was in the spotlight after being named grand champion stallion of the Paint Horse Show. "Halmark" won his two-year-old colt class and also the Pennsylvania Paint Horse Association two-year-old futurity class.

Reserve grand champion stallion honors went to "Mr. Fantastic," owned by Mr. Fantastic Syndicate of Galion, Ohio. "Mr. Fantastic" was the second place entry in the two-year-old colt class.

"Asperson," a three-year-old gelding, captured grand champion honors in the gelding competition. "Asperson" was exhibited by Tom Eppley Enterprises of Elyria, Ohio. Reserve grand champion gelding, "May Bee Versary," was exhibited by Theresa Troyer of Plain City, Ohio. "May Bee Versary" was the second place entry in the three-year-old gelding competition.

Judge for the Paint Horse Show was B. F. Yeates of Bryan, Texas.
