Be wise in selecting a child's toy

MEDIA — Every year around holiday time, children make lists of their Christmas wishes. Parents in turn are bombarded with requests for elaborate and expensive "do-everything" toys that children claim they really want.

Many of these wants come through television advertisements directed to children, notes Delaware County Extension Home Economist, Maryetta Dorricott. Children may be highly stimulated by a colorful, noise-making, quick-moving toy they see on television. The desire to have that toy becomes real and immediate. However, like adult impulse purchases, the much-wanted toy may not really meet the child's play needs or be fun.

Many toys children see advertised, ask for and receive, aren't fun for children's active play. They are simply something to watch. Young children get bored with toys that do everything themselves and parents soon hear the children saying "I have nothing to play with."

A "fun" toy is one that requires action on the part of the child. Children enjoy making their own sound effects, and providing the effort to make the toys move. The more things a child can do to and with the toy, the more play possibilities the toy has, the longer it will be enjoyed. Children need toys for fun to satisfy the urge to be active and to be doing something.

This Christmas, when selecting toys, remember it isn't so much what the toy can do that's important, it's what and how much the child can do with the toy that makes it a valuable tool in play.
