

CAMPBELL HAUSFELD

"A two stage compressor worth the name begins with intelligent design"

That means Simplicity with a capital "S". The more unnecessary elements you eliminate, the better compressor you're going to have. At Campbell-Hausfeld we threw out those troublesome spring loaded valves that are buried inside most compressors, and we designed our own simple plate and reed valve system. you can change the valve in 20 minutes - if it ever needs changing. We make the big low-pressure piston of aluminum and the small high-pressure piston of cast iron so that they weigh the same — and balance each other. We cast the head of aluminum because aluminum dissipates heat quickly. We improve reliability, simplify assembly, and hold costs down by making cylinder heads, pistons, cylinder blocks and valves interchangeable between models.

We build these compressors so that nothing can go wrong — but if it does go wrong we make it easy and inexpensive to fix. That's what we mean by Simplicity with a capital "S."
