meal was complemented with wild rice pilaf and whole green beans.
Main purpose of the event was to provide operating revenue for PPF which represents the state's $300 million poultry industry.

The banquet attendance this year was almost exactly 200 persons more than the 1979 version. In 1978, attendance was just over 1200.

Hoffman credited the Banquet Committee Co-Chairmen for the evening's success. The Committee again consisted of Robert Graybill, Pennfield Corporation; William Carlin, Hubbard Farms; and Dale M. Weaver, Victor M. Weaver, Inc.

Throng of poultrymen, industry men, and dignitaries from supporting political and organizational groups packed the Host Farm Resort lobby where hors d'oeuvres were served.

Both the Baroque Ballroom and the Cabaret of the Host were comfortably filled with dinner guests.

Entertainment in both rooms consisted of country music from Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass and comedy from Charlie Dornan, billed as the boy from New Hampshire and known for his many appearances on the old Jack Paar show.

Among the honored guests were poultry industry men and their wives at the head table in the Ballroom.

Broiler Industryman of the Year are Ken and Cora Longacre. Emerson and Candace Meashey were honored as Turkey Industryman of the Year. Walter and Jean Wheelock were cited as Egg Industryman of the Year.

Officials of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture graced the head table in the Cabaret Room.

John Hoffman gave much of the credit for the evening's success to the Gold Feather Salespersons, supporters who sold an outstanding number of tickets to the PPF Banquet.

Among the Gold Feather salespersons for 1980 are: Jules Bauerman, Horace W. Longacre, Inc.; Earl Birk, Pennfield Corp.; Robin Bissell, Horace W.
