

With their strange looks and their strange calls, the turkeys intimidated some youngsters and amused others.

The objective during the afternoon was to provide the youngsters with a hands-on approach to agriculture. This cow had many hands on her during the afternoon. The FFA conducted the program for youngsters at both Eshelman and Creswell Schools.

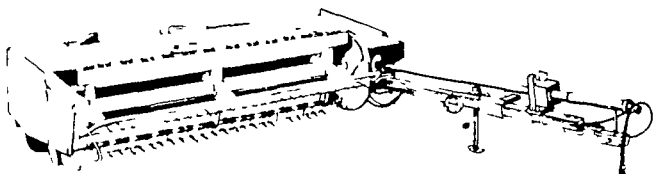

Children were encouraged to feel the wool. Doesn't that feel just like a blanket? they were asked. Prior to the petting zoo, the children saw a film about food production.

This steer stood tamely in the shade of a small tree while youngsters received answers to such questions as "Does this cow give milk", and after the answer, to the question, "You mean he's full of hamburger in there."
