

Pasto to retire

UNIVERSITY PARK — Jerome K. Pasto, associate dean for resident education, will retire on June 30 after thirty years with Penn State. Reared on a dairy farm in New York, Pasto graduated from Cornell University with a B.S. in agronomy. He worked for the U.S. Department of Agriculture as a soil agronomist and then served as a naval officer during World War II before pursuing studies at his alma mater. He received both his masters degree and a doctorate from Cornell before joining the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at Penn State in 1950. He served as consultant on the economics of farm production for the United States from 1957 to 1959. In that capacity, he traveled widely in Asia and the Far East organizing and conducting international seminars on agricultural economics. Heading a three-man exploratory mission to Venezuela for the Pan-American Union, he researched the agricultural potential of the Andean region in the summer of 1960. In 1960, Pasto became associate director of resident education; in 1963, associate dean. He has encouraged innovative instruction and numerous graduate programs and has worked with faculty in modernizing ag curricula. He was a member of the University Senate and served on various ad hoc committees to evaluate particular problems — for instance, the Graduate School committee on procedures and employment of grad students.

In 1971, he was selected by the board of directors of "Outstanding Educators of America" for his contributions to higher education. More recently, he was honored for outstanding service as the president of the National Association of Colleges and Teachers of Agriculture. He has also been invited to serve on the advisory council for the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell University.

He has been active in many alumni activities, the AG Implement Museum and the Ag Arena, to name just two. He hasn't missed any of Ag Alumni meetings.

Pasto said he plans an active retirement.

Landmark nutrition booklet available

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Big news this year is the joint release by two federal agencies of a colorful 20-page booklet, titled "Nutrition for Your Health: Dietary Guidelines for Americans."

This booklet is so new that it is not yet available for general public distribution. It was published jointly by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Joint release of the official "Dietary Guidelines for Americans" represents a major breakthrough for nutrition educators, notes Dorothy VanZandt, food and nutrition specialist.

The statements will aid greatly in presenting a consistent public message to consumers, she says.

Contributors to the guidelines include the American Society of Clinical Nutrition, the American Academia of Pediatrics, the National Cancer Institute and other reliable sources, including scientists from the two federal agencies involved in final publication.

The guidelines are written in simple language for the lay public. Chapter headings in the booklet spell out the seven major statements relating to maintenance of good health. They are as follows: eat a variety of foods; maintain ideal weight; avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol; eat foods with adequate starch and fiber; avoid too much sugar; avoid too much sodium (salt); and if you drink alcohol, do so in moderation.

The booklet is expected to be made widely available to the general public. Since the extension service is seen as the major nutrition education network in the nation, it will be given priority for copies.
