

Door-to-door contracts can be canceled

YORK — Magazines, encyclopedias, children's photographs, home improvements and cosmetics — these are just a few of the products and services sold door-to-door. Unfortunately, says Joan Lamberson, home economist, some salespeople take advantage of consumers.

The consumer should be aware that he is protected by federal and state laws. For contracts over $25 signed in your home, sellers in Pennsylvania must:

Give you a copy of the receipt or contract with the date of the sale, the seller's name and address, and — near where you sign your name — a statement informing you of your right to cancel without penalty within three business days.

Give you a Notice of Cancellation form which contains, along with the sale date and seller's name and address, a full explanation of your right to cancel without penalty. This also tells you how to proceed with the cancellation as well as the final date by which you can cancel.

If you wish to cancel your contract — whether a magazine order, your new roof, or the downspouting you realize you can't afford — you must then sign, date and return the Notice of Cancellation form to the seller within three business days.

The state Bureau of Consumer Protection recommends that you send the letter by certified mail. Keep the receipt to prove that you did send the cancellation notice on time.

Once you have followed this procedure, the seller must: return your money within 10 days. Pick up the merchandise with 20 days. If the seller fails to retrieve his merchandise, you may use it or dispose of it in whatever way you wish.
