

Vegetable recipe contest to run at Ag Progress Days

HARRISBURG — Vegetables will be in the spotlight August 20 at the first Pennsylvania Vegetable Recipe Contest at Ag Progress Days at Rock Springs, Centre County, according to Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell.

Any vegetable recipe using Pennsylvania grown vegetables as a main ingredient in any form may be entered. Persons 18 years or older, without professional food status, are invited to enter.

Twelve finalists will be chosen to prepare their recipes on August 20 with a top price of $100 awarded to the first place winner. The runner-up will receive $50, while the third and fourth place contestants will each receive $25.

The vegetable dishes will be judged on the following basis: taste, 40 points; ease of preparation and practicality, 20 points; originality, 20 points; and appearance, 20 points.

The recipes must be specific, but brand names may not be used. The recipe must be prepared as submitted, and number of servings and preparation time should be stated.

Recipes will be screened by a panel of judges and the top twelve entries will be notified of their selection. Finalists will be requested to bring their complete dish to Ag Progress Days on August 20. Facilities for refrigeration and/or reheating entries will be available. The sponsors assume no responsibility for the expense of any contestant.

The winning vegetable recipes with their proper preparation will be featured and used to promote the vegetable industry of Pennsylvania. The contest is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers, the Pennsylvania Department of agriculture and the Pennsylvania State Cooperative Extension Service.

Each contestant may submit one recipe which should be typed and submitted in triplicate to: Judi Keefer, Chairman, Schuylkill County Extension Service, Box 250, Schuylkill Haven, PA 17972, 717-385-3431. Entry deadline is July 16, 1980. In case of duplicate recipes, the one with the earliest postmark will be considered.
