considered payment," Order 36 Administrator Myron McKinley said.

According to Pittsburgh National Bank's attorney John Montgomery, the Bank was asked earlier this year to consider further loans to UDF. When the bank reviewed the Co-op's financial position and made an independent auditors check, it decided to terminate the loan relationship.

Figures from—1979 indicated UDF was experiencing losses and PNB's accountants said they did not feel there was a good possibility the ledger sheet would be improving in the near future.

Both the Bank and the Order 36 Administrator's office indicated they were not to be held responsible for any results of the note's being called nor for enforcement of the minimum payment provisions, even if either move were to force UDF to consider going to bankruptcy court.

The Bank's auditors recommended there be no further notes signed with UDF. And, since the outstanding notes were on demand, the Bank also called in the $865,000 balance.

In addition, the Bank froze all assets UDF had on account at Pittsburgh National.

Ernest Hayes said he could not understand PNB's action. "We were not back on any payments at all. Why they did this we don't know. "If we were behind on the loans we could understand this," Hayes said.

Hayes said UDF had not missed a single $30,000 monthly payment.

"All of our profits go back to the farmers or consumers at the end of the month," he pointed out. "We never had a big cash reserve built up."

Hayes said UDF hoped to repay the proposed loan within 18 months "We want to be the first group to square things up with our farmers and shippers," he said. "We're not going to stick anybody."

He admitted UDF has had a running battle with the Order 36 Market Administrator for two years over payment dates. That fight, he noted, currently is pending in the courts.

"About 90 to 95 percent of our members attended the meeting and they voted to accept the situation and help
