Recognition Contest for the Northeast.

Anderson was selected for leadership, ability, activities, interest in and experience with dairy cattle, academic standing, and future plans. He became a life member of the Dairy Shrine, received a membership plaque, and a silver cow pin. The Dairy Shrine is located at Fort Atkinson, Wis.

A research paper by Charles M. Papa, graduate student from New Castle, won first place in a national research contest of the American Dairy Science Association. The paper described the identity of two compounds in milk which tend to inhibit cholesterol synthesis by the liver. Faculty advisors were Robert D. McCarthy and Arun Kilara.

Third place in the same contest went to Philip C. Ward, graduate student from Lansdale. The paper described the isolation of cholesterol in human milk and discussed the possible significance of such factors being included in infant formula preparations. Faculty advisors were McCarthy and Kilara.

Penn State undergraduates also did well in presenting papers at the American Dairy Science Association competition.

Second place in the production division went to Lori A. Sollenberger of Everett, senior in dairy production. Third place in the manufacturing division was won by Leon R. Sollenberger of Everett, junior in general agriculture.

The Penn State Dairy Science Club was rated third best nationally in the student affiliate division of the American Dairy Science Association. Elected second vice president of the division was Logan M. Bower, junior from Blain.

Nine undergraduate students and their advisor, Dr. Lawrence D. Muller, attended the ADSA meeting held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.
