Reagan declines farm debate invitation

HARRISBURG — Ronald Reagan has declined an invitation by the National Farmers Union to engage in a farm policy debate, Leonard Zemaitis, Director of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, announced today.

"I am deeply disappointed that Governor Reagan has flatly turned us down on an opportunity to tell farmers where he stands on agriculture," Zemaitis said. "I only hope this is no indication of the kind of priority family farmers in Pennsylvania and elsewhere would receive in a Reagan Administration."

Earlier today National Farmers Union President George W. Stone echoed similar dismay. Stone said farmers all over the country are wondering where Reagan stands on agriculture since his statements in Wichita, Kansas, earlier this year, when he stumbled over parity.

"I would guess that the governor has since learned about parity, but he has said very, very little about agriculture since then," Stone said.

On September 4, from the podium of the Iowa Farmers Union Convention, Stone invited President Carter, independent John Anderson, and Governor Reagan to take part in a 90 minute farm policy debate that would be held in Des Moines, Iowa. All general farm organizations would have had a role.

The Carter Campaign responded first, saying the debate offer was under active consideration, and that a decision would be made soon.

"All we know for certain," said Zemaitis, "is that the Reagan campaign has given farmers a flat-out 'no'."
