

Sunday tops swine judging at KILE

HARRISBURG — Christine Sunday of York County recently participated in the 21st Inter-Collegiate and Junior Livestock Judging Contest, part of the Keystone International Livestock Exposition held here at the Farm Show Complex.

As a member of the Pennsylvania 4-H team, made up of four 4-H'ers from York County, Chris brought honors to her team and to herself in swine judging.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sunday won the distinction of High Scoring Individual in Junior Swine Judging. She had a score of 240 points out of a possible 250.

Chris's teammate, Laurie Dobrosky, followed in second place in Junior Individual Swine Judging. And, with Brenda Walter of Airville adding her score in the contest with her teammates', the Pennsylvania 4-

H team was named the High Team in Swine Judging.

Brenda was the only member of the Pennsylvania 4-H team to place in the top five in Cattle Judging as an individual. She scored 304 points to take fifth place. Her efforts in placing the classes of cattle, sheep and swine earned Brenda the honor of placing tenth overall in the Junior competition.

Leroy Bowles, Red Lion, was the fourth member of the team.

The team placed fifth in the overall competition.

Pennsylvania's Junior FFA team also had a good day. The team, made up of William Wylie, Tom Herr and Jeff McConn, had the second place score in cattle judging in the Junior competition.

Wylie was the second high individual in the cattle judging division, scoring 315 points. His combined scores for judging all three species earned him the rank of third high individual in the Junior contest.

Ten teams competed in the Junior contest representing nine states: Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia, Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

In the Inter-Collegiate competition, Penn State's team can in fifth overall. Steve Upperman was seventh in the Individual scoring, and he placed fifth in Swine.

Teammate Brian Keister came in second in scores for Inter-Collegiate Sheep Judging which helped the Penn State team on its way to placing second only to Purdue in sheep judging — down by only two points. The Penn State team came in fifth in cattle judging.

Twelve collegiate teams competed in the judging contest.

Chris Sunday receives her trophy for first place individual in swine judging from Ben Morgan, chairman of KILE.

Strauss brothers sweep KILE carcass contest

HARRISBURG — The two Strauss brothers from R1 Ephrata, Lancaster County, swept the carcass competition at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition with their two barrows.

Robert Strauss's barrow hung as the grand champion on the rail, while brother Steve's barrow hung next as the reserve grand champion. Steve's barrow had been tagged on-foot as the reserve champion barrow of the Junior show.

In the beef carcass class, the Summental crossbred steer exhibited by Lucy Fought, Carlisle was tagged grand champion on the rail.

The reserve grand champion on the rail had been the grand champion steer on-foot. It was exhibited by the Harry Molitor family of Fayetteville, Ohio.

In the market lamb division, the first place lamb on the rail was the on-foot grand champion exhibited by Johnson Brothers of Hillsboro, Ohio. The second place lamb was the Shropshire entry of Douce Farm, Washington Court House, Ohio.—SM

Hallowell wearing neck brace

HARRISBURG — Penrose Hallowell, State Secretary of Agriculture, will be required to wear a neck brace for approximately six weeks as a result of injuries sustained in an accident last week.

Hallowell received a fractured vertebrae, the sixth located between his shoulder blades, in the mishap on October 7. His wife, Trish, suffered a broken collar bone.

The secretary has been troubled with numbness in his left shoulder through his arm and hand as a result of the fractured vertebrae. The neck brace immobilizes the shoulder and neck area to permit healing of the fracture.

The accident occurred in Susquehanna Township, Dauphin County. The Hallowell car was struck by a township cruiser engaged in hot pursuit of another vehicle.

Both were hospitalized following the mishap. The secretary has since returned to work.
