Gehman captures first

EPHRATA — Marcy Gehman captured first place for the second consecutive year at the Lincoln Community 4-H capon roundup, last Wednesday.

Marcy, who was also reserve champion two years ago, sold her 12 pound capon for $9 per pound to David Eaby.

Reserve honors went to Tim Pfautz. His capon weighed 10 pounds and sold for $6.50 per pound to Ken Senseng.

Kerry Boyd, 4-H member for ten years, was judge for the event. Auctioneer was Wilbur House.

Seven other members participating in the roundup sold their capons for an average of $4.00 per pound. Members and their capons' selling price per pound are:

3 John Bollinger, $5.50; 4 Mike Pfautz, $3; 5. Andy Gehman, $2.25; 6. Andy Graybill, $2.50; 7. Dwight Graybill, $2.25; 8. Randy Fox, $3; 9. Ed Redcay, $2.

The Ephrata Rotary, who sponsored the event, donated the reserve champion trophy and prize money for all contestants. Champion trophy was donated by Spring Glen Farm Kitchen.

Md. pork producers approve continued check-off

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland pork producers who voted earlier this month have approved continuation of a check-off program for their commodity.

The vote was 166 for to 41 against, representing an overwhelming 80.2 percent margin of approval according to Tom Butler, Marketing Specialist, with the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

Votes were cast in 18 of the state's counties. No votes were recorded from Garrett, Allegany, Harford, Cecil and Kent counties.

As a result of the referendum, effective January 1st, 1981, each hog sold for slaughter in the state of Maryland will have 20 cents checked off at the point of first sale.

"All hogs" include finished hogs, sows, boars, cull animals and swine of any type sold for slaughter. "Point of first sale" for slaughter includes the sale of hogs enroute for slaughter through auction markets, commission firms, dealers, slaughter houses or buying stations.

The check-off does not, however, cover custom-slaughtered hogs.

There is a refund provision whereby pork producers who do not wish to participate in the program can file in writing for a return of assessments made against the hogs they have sold. The actual deduction for the assessment is automatic and is done by the sales agency or buyer involved.

Those with specific questions about the program are invited to contact Maryland Pork Producers Association President Russell G. Watson, R3, Box 238, Brandywine, MD., 20613 (301/579-6844); or Donald Morrison, Rural Rhythm Farm, Dayton, MD., 21036 (301/286-3351).

Maryland pork producers first voted in a check-off system in 1975. The monies raised through the program are used for product promotion and betterment purposes and is similar to many other voluntary producer check-off programs in agriculture.
