

Major changes made in spotlighting law

SUNBURY — Pennsylvanians are warned by the Game Commission that major changes in the law governing the use of spotlights went into effect this Tuesday.

A recent amendment to The Game Law will for the first time increase the fine for spotlighting between midnight and sunrise, provide a penalty for shining a spotlight on a building, provide a penalty for spotlighting while possessing a firearm or bow, and hold all persons responsible if they are cooperating together in illegal spotlighting activity.

On December 16, the penalty for spotlighting between midnight and sunrise increased to $25. Since 1938, the fine has been $10.

A new amendment provides a $25 penalty merely for spotlighting while in possession of a firearm, bow or other implement whereby any big game could be killed. Previously, it was not unlawful to spotlight while in possession of a firearm unless the spotlight was shining on a big game animal.

If the spotlight shines on a big game animal while the person is in possession of a firearm, bow or other implement which could be used to kill the animal, the penalty will continue to be $200 if the animal is a deer, and $400 if the animal is a bear or elk.

In the past, there has been no prohibition on spotlighting buildings. Now it is unlawful to cast the rays of light upon any house, barn or other outbuilding used in connection therewith. The penalty for casting the rays of a spotlight on a building will be $25.

Until now, the law made illegal spotlighting activity the responsibility of any person, or one or more of a group of persons together. Under the new amendment, those subject to penalties will also include persons "cooperating with each other in any manner."

Many persons, sportsmen and sportswomen as well as non-hunters, engage in spotlighting. It is an especially pleasurable pastime for parents who want their youngsters to see and enjoy wildlife, and for hunters who are trying to locate deer before the seasons open.

In recent years there has been increasing criticism from rural residents about spotlights being used by unthinking persons. Some spotlights hit light-sensitive tripping devices on rural lights that shine at night, turning them off.

Casting the rays of a strong light onto and into buildings stirs up livestock, dogs, etc. It also disturbs the sleep or rest of rural residents, leading to demands for tighter restrictions on spotlighting activities and the resultant changes in The Game Law.
