Livestock marketers name new president

KANSAS CITY, Mo. Lemmy Wilson, a marketing businessman with industry leadership experience at the local, state and national levels, will be installed as 1981 president of Livestock Marketing Association at LMA's January annual meetings.

Wilson, of Newport, Tenn., has served in several elected posts with the Kansas City-based trade group, and was 1980 first vice president. He will succeed Gail Sohler Yankton, S.D.

The owner-manager of Wilson Livestock Market in Newport since 1967, Wilson served for several years as president of his county cattlemen's association, and for two years was president of the Tennessee Livestock Association. He was president of the National Livestock Dealers Association prior to its merger with LMA in 1976, and is currently on the board of directors of the National Cattlemen's Association.

In addition to his market, Wilson is also president of Lemmy Wilson Livestock, Inc., an order buying company. He also owns a feed yard, backgrounds feeder cattle and finishes several hundred head of hogs every year.

A 1959 graduate of the University of Tennessee, Wilson spent two years while in college as a radio and TV farm director. He is married and has two children.

Other officers to be installed during the Jan. 15-17 meetings are Frank D. Diercks, Gordon, Neb., first vice president; John E. Hawkins, Monticello, Fla., second vice president; Ralph Swords, Hopkinsville, Ky., treasurer, and Earl Britton, Butte, Mont., secretary.

LMA's 20-man board of directors will also be installed at the meetings, to be held on Hilton Head Island, S.C.

Other highlights of the meeting include a 1981 marketing outlook session, in which LMA directors from across the U.S. and Canada will comment on the factors having the most impact on livestock marketing in the coming year.

LMA provides representation and commercial services to over 1,600 subscribing businesses in the marketing sector throughout the U.S. and Canada.

Choose small appliances for function

PENN STATE — There are lots of reasons to buy small electric appliances, but energy savings isn't one of them. They do require very little energy to operate, but that's exactly why using them won't result in a noticeable drop in your monthly utility bill.

A recent study of five electric cooking appliances—a griddle, a fondue pot, deep fat fryer, a crepe maker and an egg cooker—showed that regular use of all five for a year would result in a net savings of $4.60 in reduced energy costs. Marilyn M. Furry, Extension resource management specialist at The Pennsylvania State University, says that's fine if you have the appliances on hand and enjoy using them. But, she notes, most cost around $20, so have some good reasons other than energy savings in mind before you buy.

Consider how you do a job such as grilling hamburgers now; whether the new appliance would do it faster, or more efficiently; and where you would store the appliance. Also consider the cost, the warranty and how often you expect to use the appliance. A deep fat fryer may well see lots of use in one home and little in another.

The larger electrical

Furry stresses that she thinks small appliances have a place in most homes. But they should be purchased for the functions and convenience they offer, not for their potential energy savings.
