

Another new feature to Lancaster's 4-H clubs was the addition of a backpacking program. Robert James and Gus Gianopoulos served as leaders for the program in the Mountville Community 4-H Club.

Four-H members hosted 4-H'ers from Wisconsin for a week this past summer. The creek at the Farrington's Lower Hopewell Horse Center became their favorite spot on some of the hotter afternoons.

large shared piece of paper. This then was hung in the auditorium on Achievement Day.

August 21 was the day for Achievement Day. This day was designed to give kids a chance to show and be judged on projects which there is no roundup for during the regular year. According to Myers, the Farm and Home Center was packed with 4-H'ers, projects from flowers to pets and the giant mural they made at day camp. The mural stretched out to cover all four walls of the auditorium. An awards ceremony concluded the day.

Some of the city clubs, better known as EFNEP, had a city convention day

Each club made signs for the club and made nutrition posters, as that is the major project for the city members.

August also saw state days to Penn State for judging teams. The teams were picked during the summer by adult coaches.

A 4-H leaders advisory council was selected. Fifteen leaders were picked for the council which will start in January. Myers says this will be a really big boost for the effectiveness of 4-H programs in the county. We hope this council will help us meet the needs of the teen particularly."

A therapeutic riding program began this year between Easter Seals and 4-H. A total of $1100 was raised to be used to broaden the program for next year.

Five leaders attended various leaders' forums in Washington D.C. They are Mary Ann Ferro, Carol Henkel, Mr and Mrs Albert
