

USDA 1981 SIRE SUMMARY

Every year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture compiles a list of active AI studs for each major dairy breed. The list is mailed late each summer to extension agents, AI organizations, breed associations and dairy record processing centers.

The list is useful in comparing production differences, but no attempt is made in the compilation to list other genetic traits - leg strength, for example - which may be of economic importance to individual herd owners.

The last column in the following tables shows Preditable Difference for dollars. It is based on an average milk price of $12.40 for 3.5 test milk with a fat differential of 16.2 cents.

To locate an individual bull, check the first number behind his name. This is the stud code identification number and matches one of the organizations listed in the chart following the sire summaries.
