Use goggles — save an eye

LTITIZ — When pesticides and any farm working with fertilizers, chemicals, you may suffer a severe eye injury — and possible blindness — unless you wear appropriate eye protection, warns the National Society to Prevent Blindness. "More than half of all agricultural eye injuries over the past few years involved chemicals, according to reports from hospital emergency rooms," said the Society's executive director, Virginia S. Boyce.

"Ninety percent of eye injuries could be prevented with the use of proper protective eyewear and safety precautions," Boyce stressed.

"Whenever you handle fertilizers, pesticides, chemical cleaners and solvents, wear goggles fitting snugly around the eyes, with hooded vents to keep out liquids," Boyce advised.

The Society also offers these safety tips:

Study the products' label for current use and observe listed precautions.

Understand thoroughly how to operate all equipment prior to use.

Always store pesticides in original containers, keeping them tightly closed.

Carry at least five gallons of plain water on tractors and other farm equipment.

Should any chemicals reach the eyes, flush them with water instantly, holding the eyelids open, and continue flushing eyes for at least 15 minutes. Then seek immediate medical attention.

"Delaying treatment increases the likelihood of vision loss," Boyce cautioned. "Never put anything but water in the eyes; salves or ointments can complicate first aid and later medical treatment."

Highly concentrated liquid (and gaseous) fertilizers can inflict serious injuries. Of special concern is anhydrous ammonia, a gas pressurized to liquid state and used to boost crop production.

One of the most damaging substances to the eye anhydrous ammonia begins destroying cells and tissues within seconds of contact.

In addition to carrying at least five gallons of water on the tractor, nurse tank and applicator, all anhydrous ammonia users should keep a plastic squeeze bottle of water in a shirt pocket to flush the eyes immediately, in case of contact with anhydrous.

Many eye injuries occur when pressurized anhydrous ammonia is transferred from bulk containers to smaller tanks, a process repeated several times.

"Check all hose fittings and connections in equipment every day," Boyce said. "Just one minor defect — a weak point in a hose, faulty valve, a worn fitting — and eyesight may be threatened."

Anhydrous ammonia and its potentially blinding effects are vividly depicted in a film called "For the Rest of Your Life." A dramatization of an accident with anhydrous illustrates the dangers, the safest handling procedures and the proper eye and face protection equipment. The film is available on loan from the National Society to Prevent Blindness, 79 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10016. The National Society, established in 1908, is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through community service programs, public and professional education and research.
