Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My pleasure is to see things neat and in order. In other words, "A place for everything and everything in its place." But not all family members agree with this theory. And, it is quite difficult, in fact I might say impossible, to run my life this way.

My thoughts jump from this activity to that activity and then back again. I'm trying to organize the 4-H Club in my community and am having trouble getting leaders for particular projects. Telephoning takes a lot of time that I could be using to weed my garden and rake the lawn.

Then too I try to plan on time to take my aged mother on necessary business trips. This too is something to which I must devote time; plus, bothersome trips to doctors and dentists for checkups.

I've wanted to invite some of my friends to drop in for cake and coffee before the busy garden season is here. We all are interested in quilts and coverlets and recently attended a lecture on them at a local museum.

Trying to contact all of our children and invite them for an Easter dinner is also a job. Even after I find them at home I discover that they have other plans. One is going fishing with friends and one has promised another family to eat at their home. Oh well, then the Easter Bunny won't have so many baskets of candy to fill and hide.

As this is our youngest child's last year in High School, she too has things for me to do in the evenings. There is the school play and the Wind Ensemble in which she plays her flute. Of course I enjoy these activities but it seems there is no easy way to have an orderly and peaceful life style.

But what am I talking about, there will probably be plenty of time for peace and quiet in years to come. As of now, I must bake that cake and cook some of my fresh rhubarb.

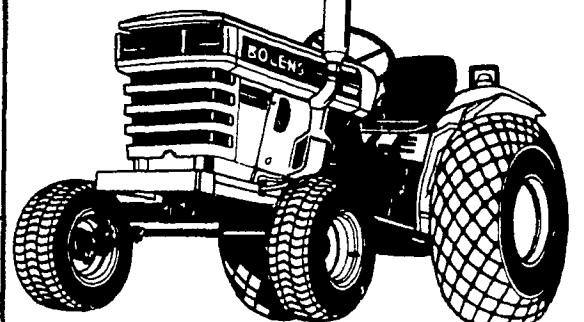

Dairy club discusses mastitis

EASTON — The Northampton County 4-H dairy club met on March 16 to hear speaker Philip Palmer talk on mastitis and to discuss upcoming fund raisers. Following the speaker was a review of parts of the cow by younger members.
