

Eisenhart wins lamb

required to be shown at the York Fair in September. It will later be returned temporarily to the donors, the Greg Lau family at Loganville, for breeding.

If the offspring is a female, that ewe lamb will be returned to the Sheep and Wool Producers for allocation to another lucky "chain" recipient.

If the first offspring is a ram, it will remain the property of Bev, and the ewe will be bred again. That second offspring would become the property of the Sheep Producers group, to be given away if it is a ewe, or if a ram lamb, to be sold for the purpose of purchasing another "chain" animal.

After the chain lamb is repaid to the association, all subsequent offspring will remain the property of Bev for building her own flock.

A member of the 4-H program for six years, shepherdess Bev is active in the county's lamb club, Thomasville Community Club, exchange, and county council. She's a teen leader and carries projects in sewing, leathercraft and ceramics.

Over eighty buyers from the county, and from as far away as upstate Pennsylvania and Maryland, registered for the market lamb and purebred stock sale featured on the afternoon program. The field day included morning sessions on spinning, shearing and lamb carcass cutting.

Although the air was chilly and heavy clouds lumbered overhead, bidding was warm and spirited for the market lamb and purebred sale that capped the York Sheep and Wool Producers field day.
