

Soil Stewardship

Week set to begin

Sign of the season during this annual pause to honor soil stewardship is a field of alfalfa in the foreground. Quite a few got an early start in recent days on the first cutting of the queen of forages. The good growing start and excellent haying weather will help refill those silos and rebuild supplies of feed which were cut into rather severely by last season's drought.

Almost blending into the fields being worked is this steward of the soils. Such is the nature of this important work. Too often the work on the land goes on all around us, largely unnoticed and unheralded. But this coming week is the time to stop and honor it.
