BY LAURIE DOBROSKY
YORK — Green shrubs, hanging plants and birdbaths helped to set the stage for the York County annual fashion review held here at the 4-H Center last Wednesday. The theme for this year's show was '4-H Fashion Park'.
 Over 60 4-H clothing project members modeled their completed outfits before the critical eyes of the judges.

The 26 senior members presented their outfits to professional judges, including home economics teachers and 4-H leaders, who considered each article's neatness, workmanship, and how the outfit complimented the seamstress.
 The junior members were literally surrounded by critics during their competition. As their names were called, each 4-H'er stepped into a 'circle' of fellow 4-H members who practiced judging the garment right along with the professional judges who made the final decision. While the judges were tallying the scores to determine which outfits could go on to regional
