Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My trip to Europe was a real adventure. It was an emotional experience traveling through the very areas from which my ancestors came in the early 1700's. In the next few articles, I would like to share with you some of the sights which I saw and the places that I went.

The tour group was composed of 43 other farm folks from Virginia, New York, Vermont and Maryland. We not only saw big cities in five countries, but also visited dairy farms and farm homes in most all of these countries.

We traveled first class and stayed in hotels which charged from $80 to $100 per night per room. For 15 days I lived in the lap of luxury and had all of my meals prepared for us. Of course, some were more ample than others.

Each morning started with a continental breakfast, courtesy of the hotel, and included hard rolls, butter, jelly and coffee or tea. I did miss my cereal, fruit and milk, though.

Our one complaint was the lack of water. Apparently Europeans do not have water with their meals. So we were often thirsty, although our tour guide tried to get pitchers of water for us. The one thing that was in ample supply was beer, wine, scotch and bourbon.

I left New York City at night and after 7 hours on a plane carrying some 400 people at 33,000 feet and traveling 650 miles per hour, we landed at the Heathrow Airport on London. A bus took us to our hotel where we saw lots of other tourists from Indian and Japan. Some wore their colorful native costumes.

Never before could I truly understand when my daughters spoke of "jet lag" but now I do. It took a bit of resting to make up for a night's lost sleep. We turned our clocks ahead 6 hours by the time we got to Paris.

Our bus was brand new and we were told it cost 62,000 pounds or about $120,000. We walked through Westminster Abbey which was built in 1090 and where many kings and queens are buried. In the afternoon we saw the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace and then drove into the countryside to visit Windsor Castle which was one of the first fortresses built to defend London. It contained many paintings, gun and sword collections, knight's armor and ornate furniture in the huge rooms. We were shown Piccadilly Circus, Big Ben, Parliament and the Thames.

Next week I'll tell you about the English farm and the Kent County Agriculture Show.
