Antlerless license postage may be due

HARRISBURG Recipients of Pennsylvania anterless deer licenses may have to pay a few cents additional postage to have their licenses delivered this year.

When applications for licenses were bring submitted, first class postage was 18 cents per application. Many hunters put postage totaling eighteen cents per license on return envelopes.

On November 1, first class postage rate !s scheduled to rise to 20 cents, but the increase was announced too late for most hunters to attach additional postage to the return envelopes.

county Most treasurers are processing licenses as rapidly as possible, but some high-volume counties with small staffs will be unable to put them in the mail prior to November 1. some Therefore, recipients may have to pay several cents additional postage to have the licenses delivered.

Regional Postal Service officials have assured the Game Commission that licenses with insufficient postage mailed after the first of November will be forwarded. The recipient, if he or she is at home when the license is delivered, will pay the additional postage to the mail carrier.

If the hunter is not at home when delivery is attempted, it may be necessary to make a trip to the post office to pay the additional postage and pick up the license.

Problems with postal regulations first surfaced in 1980 when one county seat postmaster held up delivery of antierless deer license applications to the county treasurer. The postmaster pointed out that some envelopes, containing more than one application, had only one first class postage stamp, a violation of Postal Law. Game Commission officials, who met with regional Postal Service officials, learned that Section 381.31 of the Domestic Mail Manual "First-class states, postage must be paid on each individual letter when two or more individuals... mail in one envelope ... letters ... to a mutual addresse." Postal authorities contended each application is an individual letter. Postal officials later alerted postmasters across the state, while the Game Commission spread the word among license applicants to put one stamp on each envelope for each application and license involved.

The Game Commission also spelled out postal regulations in the Digest of Hunting and Trapping Regulations, issued with each hunting license. Additionally, a U.S. Postal Service news release advised antierless

Still, with all the publicity, many applications were submitted with insufficient postage, and were returned to senders. A number of applicants claiming they were unaware of the postal regulation, have requested special consideration, and that additional licenses be issued to them.
