

USDA issues new rules on food stamp program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently issued new rules requiring food stamp recipients in large metropolitan areas to show photographic identification when receiving their food stamps. Secretary of Agriculture John R.

Block said the new photo ID system "will play an important role in joint efforts by the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Justice to crack down on abuse of the food stamp program."

Under the new rules, USDA will no longer replace food stamps reported lost or stolen. Block said these and other major anti-fraud measures are part of the Reagan administration's overall effort to eliminate fraud and abuse in the federal food stamp program.

State welfare agencies will be required to institute photo ID system within a year in food stamp project areas with 100,000 or more recipients, unless they get an exemption from USDA's Food and Nutrition Service. Smaller food stamp project areas may also be required to install photo ID systems if the FNS and the USDA Inspector General's office finds it useful to protect program integrity.

"The new photo ID system is principally designed to prevent the issuing of duplicate benefits," Block said. "For example, if a food stamp authorization card is stolen from the mail, the photo ID requirement can prevent an ineligible person from using the authorization card to obtain food stamps illegally. By recording and cross-checking ID numbers, the new system will discourage individuals from attempting to get a double allotment of food stamps by reporting their first authorization card lost or stolen and requesting a second."

"Individuals caught defrauding the government in this program are subject to criminal and civil penalties. Further, under new legislation recently passed, individuals would be required to pay back any fraudulent benefits received by having future benefits reduced," Block said.

Other new rules will tighten procedures for replacing food stamp coupons and authorization cards which recipients report lost, stolen or destroyed.

"Through these new guidelines

we aim to protect food stamp recipients against legitimate verifiable losses while limiting the government's liability and the cost to the taxpayer," Block said.

Under the new rules, coupons reported lost or stolen from recipients will no longer be replaced by the federal government. However, in certain disaster situations such as floods or fires, destroyed coupons may be replaced once in a six-month period. In the past, any food stamp recipient could receive a replacement for their food stamps if they were reported lost or stolen. Such a policy has led to widespread abuse in some areas.

Limits will be placed on the frequency and condition under which local welfare agencies can replace authorization cards lost in the mails or destroyed in a fire of similar disaster.

Block said these new rules represent only the start of a number of new procedures the Food and Nutrition Service will be issuing in the food stamp program designed to reduce fraud, improve program management and assure that benefits go to those actually in need.
