

Federal grain inspection 'rifs' 77

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Under a reorganization of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Federal Grain Inspection Service, 77 positions will be eliminated and 45 positions will be downgraded in the headquarters staff and changes will be made later in the field office structure. Kenneth A. Gilles, administrator of the agency, said the remainder of the 139 people in the headquarters staff will receive lateral reassignments. All personnel involved in this first phase of the reorganization have been notified, he said.

"The Federal Grain Inspection Service was created by the Congress in 1976, from the grain division of the Agricultural Marketing Service which was responsible for the Grain Standards Act of 1916. It performs a public service—to facilitate domestic and international trade in grains and related commodities. "With reduced allocations and greater dependence on user fees expected in the coming years, it is time to streamline our activities and increase the efficiency of the work this agency does," said Gilles.
