

Anne Staver of Palmyra and Penn State Agriculture Dean Samuel Smith set the top-selling sheep of the day. Staver's Dorset ewe sold for $775 to C,J and K Sheep Farm, Ithaca, N.Y.

The first consignment sold in the Ag Arena Sale, Singing Brook Astro Betty, is surrounded by buyers, consignors and well-wishers, while auctioneers Charles and Horace Backus look on with approval. From left to right the group includes Bill Nichol, Pa. Holstein Assoc. executive secretary, Frank Sankey, buyer,

George Foster, Charlene Rohrer, 1981 Pa. Dairy Princess, John Oswald, Penn State President, Samuel Smith, Penn State dean of agriculture, Obie Snider, consignor, and a member of the Penn State Dairy Science Club at halter.

They've backed up the "Lions" many times, so why not the cattle, sheep and hogs? These four Penn State cheerleaders added to the excitement of the benefit with a cheer before each sale. From left to right the group includes Bill Corman, Sharon Basile, Brenda Murphy and Dave Wright.

Yes, we have no bananas but we've got plenty of luncheon meat, butter, cheese, and produce. Penn State meats professor John Ziegler offers a five-pound turkey breast to hungry bidders who bought the surplus from the sale luncheon.

This bred Yorkshire gilt, was one of two hogs which brought a sale-high $500. The gilt is backed from left to right by Penn State agriculture dean, Samuel Smith, buyer Harry Bachman, Annville and consignor Leon Arnold, Lebanon.