

"Sherrie" a filly who was Grand Champion Filly at the 1981 Expo was bred and shown by the Orndorff family. Sherrie is now owned by Pheasant Hollow Farm. Pictured here with owner Joanne Kinsey, Sherrie is valued at $10,000.

people, he is very particular what he buys for Pine Valley Ranch. His horses haven't won any classes at the Farm Show yet, but he is continually improving his breeding stock through certain bloodlines.

Everyone in the Orndorff family seems to be involved in the horse business. Having farmed with horses, L.B. does all his own vet work, breeding, and foaling. His wife Regina handles all the horses and helps L.B. at breeding time. Their youngest daughter Molly is the 1981 Pa. Draft Horse and Mule Breeders Queen. Their son Bradley and other daughter Mary Kay, all work with the horses since the Orndorff horses are also called upon for parades, store promotions, and even to bring Santa Claus to town at Christmas time.

L.B. and Regina have no interest in getting into pulling teams, but they are very interested in increasing their broodmare numbers and working with some hitching teams. They hope to get their broodmare herd to ten to fifteen mares.

Then, says L.B., "I'm going to get out of the livestock business. I'll stop farming almost 300 acres, and just making a living off my horses. I'll liquidate the machinery and use the horses to do more of the work around here. I'll just kinda' slow down."

But with L.B.'s positive attitude, a 2-year-old grandson Eric to train as a horseman, and all those beautiful Belgian horses in his front pasture, it is doubtful if L.B. Orndorff will ever slow down.
