promote the sale of dairy products, with an emphasis on manufactured products. However, Dondero noted that the NMPF board did not place a restriction on fluid milk.

"The bottom line is, of course, to increase milk consumption," she said.

Dondero admitted that both proposals will be presented with "loose guidelines," before Congress.

"We took the ideas in concept form to some leadership of ag committees," she said. In addition, a copy has been submitted to U.S. Agriculture Secretary Block.

Dondero said she is hopeful the NMPF can go before Congress with strong, positive support. Currently, the Federation is working on proposal drafts. Certain mechanics, such as who would serve on both dairy boards and how they will be appointed have yet to be "nailed down," she reported.

"The details can be worked out later," she noted. "Let's take care of the principles, first."
